At first we are going to randomize the types of random Pokemon in the game to make them different to one another and make it more exciting. We are going to do this by taking the sets for each area and converting them into a random list. If there is a random list it will be equal to 0, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9 or 10. By typing the values 0 through 10 in a list we should get a random set of Pokemon. A special algorithm will be used to convert them into a random list, because having a gap between the types will be annoying when it comes to typing. So this list will be converted into a list of numbers. . A random list will be formed by typing the values from the list of numbers 0 through 10 into a list of list. The result will then be added to the random list that we already have. So now we have two lists of number and we just have to switch the variables in our program to produce a random set of Pokemon. .
