The program was originally broadcast on all three Foxtel channels: the Nine Network's TEN, Southern Cross Nine's SCN and Southern Cross Ten's SCN+, and was repeated throughout the day on the Sky News digital multicast service. In late April 1998, Sky News launched a five-minute news bulletin presented by Warren Brown and David Speers. The program was presented between the program schedule on TEN and SCN, and was also broadcast on SCN+ during the day. The bulletin was titled Sky News News on One. It was later renamed Sunrise, when Sky News rebranded its program schedule. On 31 December 2000, Sunrise was replaced by the first of what would become three bulletins presented by David Speers and Joanne Murray. Sky News Australia Sunrise was initially broadcast between 5:30 am and 6:00 am, and was repeated on Sky News digital multicast channel Sky News Anytime during the day. It later extended to cover the entire day, after the Sunrise bulletin moved to air at 5:30 am on Sunday mornings and after the AM Edition news bulletin. On 1 February 2009, Sky News Australia Sunrise began to be broadcast live on Sky News USD,
