FIFA is a fantasy football game. With FIFA 19, we introduced Real Player Motion Technology that gets players feeling the speed and power of the game like never before. So now we've taken the next step with Real Player Motion 2.0, delivering a completely new football experience. Real Player Motion 2.0 New pass flicks deliver a more precise and realistic movement that is more responsive in every dimension. Players now visually step off the ball, opening up space and more room on the pitch. Just like the real thing, every player now moves in the direction of the swing and has been altered to improve their reactions to pivots and turns in mid-air. The movement and rules of the physical game have been altered in many ways, for example, players no longer dive - simply let themselves fall, and smaller players have been made bigger and faster. FIFA's AI has been enhanced with new defensive and attacking systems, including skillful dribbling AI, more situational awareness, and new player control behaviour. For example, the offside rule now applies to crossing where the player crosses the ball before it makes contact with the crossbar. Dribbling in tight spaces is now even more challenging than ever. Player Intelligence also increases from 2019 to 2020 in the form of a more sophisticated player AI (Sensitive A.I.) for players in possession. This involves great senses, awareness of space, read of the game, as well as their ability to make decisions and anticipate moves. This includes new and improved cross and long pass animations that account for the on-the-ball movements of players. New Collisions and Decision Making AI's reactions and behaviours have been improved. At the start of every goal kick, all defenders now seek out the ball and look to block any potential crosses and through balls. As player speed increases, AI's playmaking abilities improve. The defending central defenders now make the most intelligent choices to determine the flow of the game, including the best moments to press the ball and when to retreat and mark. AI defenders are also smarter about their positioning, with an understanding of where other players are positioned and how they are likely to react if pressured. In defending passes, the AI is better at reading the game, moving and positioning themselves in the correct area of the pitch. For example, if an attacker comes onto the ball quickly, the AI has an awareness of their positioning and anticipation when it is
